Corten Steel, also known as weathering steel, is a special steel originally developed for bridge building and skyscraper construction due to its incredible strength. It develops a protective, striking rust appearance on exposure to the weather, creating warm rich textures not always associated with metal. Due to the chemical composition of Corten Steel, a very dense oxidation layer is formed during the weathering process which protects the blue steel inside. If this protective barrier is compromised, it will simply form a new skin to protect itself. Corten Steel is extremely durable and has a far higher resistance to atmospheric corrosion than other steels.

Corten Steel Weathering Guide

- Stage 1 - Freshly manufactured Corten Steel. At this stage the dark oily residue coats the Corten Steel.
- Stage 2 - The oily residue is beginning to break down, as the Corten Steel begins to weather.
- Stage 3 & 4 - The "Run-Off" stage – This can take around 3-9 months depending on weather and positioning.
- Stage 5 & 6 - The final stages of the weathering process. Some "Run-Off" may still occur as the Corten Steel's patina develops to a striking more consistent appearance.

Finish / Weathering

When you first receive your Corten Steel products they will arrive in an un-weathered or partly weathered condition. Once placed outside the weathering process will begin. This can take some time; Corten Steel has a reactive patina period of between 3 and 9 months depending on location and climate. The patina or rust acts as a protective barrier - it will not penetrate or compromise the structural integrity of the material. The colouration of each item will vary as the weathering process takes place, eventually producing a rusty brown patina.

Run Off

During the weathering process the Corten Steel produces carbon run off or staining to adjacent materials such as stone or concrete. To reduce this possible staining, some Corten Steel products are supplied with small feet or a stand, lifting the product and preventing direct contact with the flooring material. After the initial reactive period Corten Steel will cure and self-seal with little to no carbon run off.

The weathering process of Corten Steel is integral to this product and as such we will not accept any responsibility for damage caused to surrounding materials as a result of carbon run off from Corten Steel products. Please ensure you do not place your product on any surface that may be damaged during the weathering process.

The Benefits

Weathering steel is characterized by what the American Institute of Steel Construction (AISC) describes as "useful corrosion," in which naturally occurring rust not only lengthens the lifecycle of a weathering steel structure, but also saves the time and money associated with painting and maintenance. Rust on weathering steel sheets is not a sign of decay as with corrosive steel sheets; in fact, it is just the opposite. Instead of ruining the metal, however, rust actually serves to protect Corten from further corrosion forming the barrier which eventually seals the exposed Corten steel sheets against the very elements that caused them to rust in the first place. According to AISC, "this stable barrier layer greatly resists further corrosion, reducing it to a low value."

Corten steel has been well-received by a community of architects and design engineers because of its considerable benefits.

Fiberglass Planters are known for their tough composition. As such, a planter made from this material will be long lasting.

A typical 36" x 30" round concrete planter weighs 1,150 lbs while a similar style and size in fiberglass weighs 48 lbs. This makes fiberglass even more effective for roof top applications.

CG PRODUCTS SIGNATURE COLORS

The unique properties of Fiberglass make it suitable for a wide range of products and offer advantages that are not found in other types of material. Some of these advantages include:

Corrosion – Environmentally Tough

Fiberglass is non-corrosive and has a much longer life expectancy when compared to a variety of other materials. In highly corrosive environments fiberglass is the preferred choice over metal, wood, or plastic and a popular choice where exposure to harsh environments is a concern. Because fiberglass is chemically inert and corrosion-resistant, it offers an economical alternative to stainless steel.

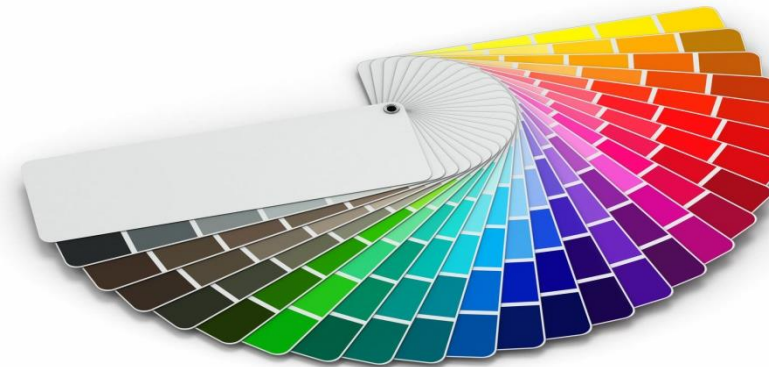

Low Maintenance

Fiberglass containers require very little maintenance – no rust, no wood rot.

Our planters are crafted out of a top quality fiberglass material, making them exceptionally strong, durable and safe enough for either indoor or outdoor use. The size alone of these planters makes it the preferred choice for commercial properties, storefronts, garden landscapes and large foyers. Combine multiple rectangle planters to create a live border around your outdoor terrace, use them to add a bit more privacy to your patio or line them up to separate indoor seating areas. You can also place a container or two along the wall of your garden, position them in a window or arrange them along your front corridor.

We offer:

- High quality flawless construction
- Attractive décor enhancers
- Ideal for commercial or residential use
- Durable
- Light weight

CUSTOM COLORS

- Indoor/Outdoor use
- Minimal care and maintenance required (occasional wax/polish)
- Self watering system available

CG Products Signature Colors are matte charcoal, matte bronze and matte white. Custom colors are offered in an unlimited variety of hues and finishes.
